

Learn how others are building effective K-12 partnerships!

Get case studies, proven practices and more in the K-12 Partnership Report

Whether you've got years of experience in K-12 partnership development or you're new to the field, you need current and practical information from the field to guide your efforts. Unfortunately that information has been hard to come by—until now.

K-12 Partnership Report was created specifically for partnership practitioners—the people who build strong, sustainable, and effective partnership-driven programs. These are people who don't have time to reinvent the wheel: they need to know what's worked in other markets and what hasn't, and this is exactly what K-12 Partnership Report was designed to provide.

Each issue of K-12 Partnership Report provides subscribers with information they won't find anywhere else, helping them build more effective and efficient partnership-driven programs. Features include:

- Case Studies - In every issue of the newsletter, highlighting successful models in other markets and showing how and why they work.

- Proven Practices - Articles highlighting field-tested practices, helping you run an effective program.
- Research - Reviews of research on various subjects to give you reliable information for decision-making.
- Interviews - Talks with practitioners and market experts, giving you insight on the market and on the partnership process.
- And More - Including industry updates, reviews of new resources, event listings, and announcements.

What's in KPR?

KPR offers proven practices and case studies - information you can immediately apply to your program. Recent articles include:

- The case for middle-skill preparedness
- Engaging business leaders
- Developing workforce skills through project based learning
- The Door County career awareness campaign: how online video linked high school students to local manufacturers
- How to win (or lose) that grant before filling out the application
- What mentoring is, how to do it well, and what it can do for children and adults
- Skills-based volunteering at Deloitte
- Program profile: Project Lead The Way

Note: KPR is published 10 times per year, monthly except for June and December
